Landmark House is one of Auckland's most distinctive character buildings. The eight-story Art Deco tower, with a corner turret, was completed in 1930 as the headquarters for the Auckland Electricity Power Board. At the time of completion, it was the tallest building in Auckland.

Located at 187 Queen Street, bordering Durham Lane, the building is positioned in the absolute heart of the city. This prominent location offers access to an unparalleled amount of amenity, as well as access to all of the CBD's main transport hubs.
